REFLECTIONS FROM JOSH JONES

"For My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways My ways," declares the LORD.
"For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so My ways and My thoughts are higher than yours."

Isaiah 55:8-9

Today we begin the most important 7 days in the Christian Church calendar. When Jesus rides into Jerusalem on a donkey for Palm Sunday, this is so much more than a quaint choice of transport. It's a volatile symbol of the subversive nature of the Kingdom message that Jesus Christ has spent his entire ministry proclaiming to anyone with ears to hear and eyes to see. The profound and piercing wisdom of these words from the prophet Isaiah (above), are never more clearly on display than in the events leading up to the crucifixion of Christ on the Cross and the Resurrection. EVERYTHING about this week reveals the startling difference between the thoughts and ways of God (as revealed in Christ), and what are so often the thoughts and ways of humanity. At every turn on the way to the Cross, we see the whole panorama of the broken human condition played out by all the main protagonists.

- Peter is all our capacity for denial. When we speak the fine words, but come to the crunch, self-preservation wins out.
- Judas is all our betrayals of the greater cause for the lure of our own gain and the seduction of money.
- Caiaphas, the Chief Priest, willing to sacrifice a principle or a person (in this case Jesus) for the supposed greater good of an organisation or institution. How many times have we seen the sorry consequences of this?
- Pilate is all of us, cynically washing our hands of a situation that's getting just a little too messy and complicated. Play out the easy option of compromise and keep the status quo ticking over.
- The Roman soldiers, mocking and taunting Jesus. The inner bully that lurks in us all.
- And finally, the Crowd representing the fickle spirit in all of us, and our capacity to find the scapegoat and desire blame.

On Good Friday, the full redeeming power of the Cross will confront all of us to consider where our thoughts and ways are not in true kingdom alignment with the thoughts and ways of God. But we will also see the full enormity of just how wide, long, high and deep is God's love revealed in Christ. The magnificent redeeming power of the Cross, is that the love on display judges all in our human condition that 'is not love', in order to reconcile and restore all that 'is not love' back to the way and truth of Cross-shaped, Christ-shaped love. As St Paul so beautifully captures ... "God demonstrates his own love for us in this: while we were still sinners, Christ died for us" Romans 5:8. "God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself" 2 Corinthians 5:19.

I'm still firmly convicted that in a world awash with uncertainty, brokenness and hurting, that the message of this Holy Week of Easter has to power, to captivate, compel and transform hearts that are truly seeking. Even when I wasn't a Christian, I recognised deep in my bones, that the cross of Jesus was the ultimate revelation of the true power of self-giving love. And I still believe that so many others do too. It touched and transformed my life and our prayer for this deeply sacred journey of Holy week, is that all of us take the time to fully engage with its full power. From Palm Sunday to the Resurrection, let us hear what the Spirit is saying to the Church and our own hearts.
